NATIONAL CONFERENCE

Climate Change and Water Security: Mitigation Strategies and AI Solutions for Developing Countries

05-06 Feb 2026

Organized by
Department of Civil Engineering
Central University of Jharkhand
Ranchi- 835222

About the conference

Water is the keystone of life, yet it is increasingly becoming one of the most vulnerable resources in the face of climate change. Rising global temperatures are disrupting rainfall patterns, intensifying droughts, accelerating glacier melt, and increasing the frequency of extreme weather events. These changes are not just environmental—they are deeply social, economic, and political.

In India, where agriculture is heavily dependent on monsoons and groundwater, the consequences are already visible. Erratic rainfall, shrinking rivers, and declining groundwater levels are threatening food security, livelihoods, and public health. Urban centers are facing water stress, while rural communities struggle with access and quality. The urgency to address these challenges has never been greater. This conference is designed to be a catalyst for action, bringing together diverse stakeholders to explore the intersection of climate change and water availability.

Themes of the Technical Sessions :

Session I: Climate change Impacts

- Impact of climate variability on rainfall and river flows
- Glacial retreat and its implications for downstream water supply
- Hydrological modeling for climate forecasting

Session II: Technology and Innovation

- Smart irrigation and water-saving technologies
- Remote sensing and GIS in water resource planning
- Innovations in wastewater treatment and reuse
- The role of AI, IoT, and satellite data in water management

Session III: Community and Ecosystem Resilience

- Traditional water management practices
- Community-led adaptation strategies
- Ecosystem-based approaches to water security

Note: Theme wise best paper will be awarded
